Getting Ready for 2021

Dear Friends,

It's amazing how fast and how slow, simultaneously, this unbelievable year of 2020 has gone by.

Fast - because so much enormous change has been unleashed all at once, accelerating so much other pent up change like a boulder (the pandemic) tossed into a pond (our earth) releasing a variety of strong undercurrents and pent up environmental, social, governance and technological ripples.

Slow - because it has been a truly difficult, painful, challenging and for some sadly earth-shattering year that no one will forget.

Hopefully it will also be a year from which we will pull lessons learned to build a more resilient, inclusive, responsible global and local model of economic and political community.

This issue provides some new and recent resources to help you build resilience as we transition into 2021:

- I had the honor to join the Board of Directors of the Cyber Future Foundation as we kicked off their 2020 5th Annual Summit with dozens of virtual sessions with cutting edge actionable cyber information from some of the leading cyber-minds worldwide. You can access all of these sessions on the CFF YouTube Channel.

- You can access the CFF Panel I participated in about Cyber Risk and Resilience here.
- My latest article for the World Economic Forum why we need to add Technology to the ESG equation to form ESGT.
- My Compliance Innovation podcast with the legendary Tom Fox where we talk about ESG.

Wishing you and yours a very safe beginning of winter in the north and summer in the south - more than anything else wear a mask, keep your physical distance (but stay virtually close), wash your hands and take good care of yourself and your loved ones.
